

The e-rate process is so convoluted that schools are hiring firms to do their e-rate for them...thus a portion of the money intended for schools is ending up in the hands of private firms. Further, the regimented timelines and "zero-mistake-tolerance" filing put undue burden on the schools. Isn't this program FOR the schools?